PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Hi Club Members

This is my last report as Club President, as the honour of the role now goes to newly voted President Peter Kerr.

I want to take the opportunity to thank the many people who supported me as President and who make our Club such a success.

Northern Suburbs Dog Club has over 1000 members register each year actually, closer to 1500! The aim of our club is to provide positive instructing to handlers - both those who want to have happy healthy pets, and those who want to go on to compete in obedience and agility. This takes a lot of effort.

We rely heavily on our group of volunteer instructors who do a fantastic job each week. I can't thank them enough. They share a dedication and passion for dog training and turn up each Sunday and Wednesday to pass on their knowledge to all of us. I learned about dog training from Northern Suburbs instructors, and their knowledge and kindness is invaluable.

While we see the hard work carried out by the instructors, we don't always see the work carried out on the administration side, lead by your committee. In my three years as president, my life has been made easy by the terrific, friendly people I have worked with. They are always willing to take on the next challenge.

In particular I need to draw attention to Frances Coull - our outgoing Secretary. Frances always has a smile and laugh, she keeps the atmosphere upbeat, yet she remains professional and ploughs through the administration work - seemingly effortlessly. Frances has always been there for me willing to discuss issues and quickly move things forward.

Frances has handed over the Secretary position to Daniela Fischer, who has the same upbeat, take-it-on attitude.

Paul Dyer, Vel Donatti and Sue Boxer also need special mention. Paul has been Treasurer for the last three years and has run the Club's finances smoothly. Paul remains as Treasurer. Vel is our Membership Officer and has looked after our membership database for many years, entering new members and managing updates weekly. Sue Boxer has been Vice President over the last year and remains in that position. Sue has also been the Obedience Trial Secretary for the last couple of years - doing a great job of organising canine trials, member's achievement trials and member's competitions. No small task.

Finally, I would like to thank the rest of the committee for their tremendous effort and for the way they have moved the Club forward. I would also like to thank Stacey, our Hot Dog Editor for the work and chasing she has done in putting together the Hot Dog for the last two years.

Good luck to the new President and committee. I hope you all take the opportunity to thank them and to give them your support.

Happy training everyone!

President Graeme Fairley

THE HOT DOG

FROM THE EDITOR

Hi Clubbies!

This is the last edition of the HotDog that I will be compiling for the Club. I am happy to announce Ms Marija Gutmann will take over the reigns as HotDog Editor in 2012.

I have thoroughly enjoyed volunteering for the Club and highly recommend it to any prospective volunteers in the future!

Many thanks to all those who have assisted with contributions, updates and edits – it is very much appreciated!

I am sure Marija will let you know how best to contact her however, in the meantime please send through any editorial to the President via admin@northernsuburbsdogclub.org

Take care and enjoy!
Stacey Newton HotDog Editor

HOW TO PREPARE YOUR DOG FOR OBEDIENCE TRIALS

www.grcv.org.au

Training the obedience exercises to perfection is of course important, but it is not enough. Without preparing your dog for performing at a trial, you risk getting a dog that is "ring wise" before long.

Now, preparing the dogs for trials is a big part of our training. There are different aspects of trialing that can be worked on separately. Most of it can be done already with a puppy or young dog. Here are some of the things we work on before trialing:

- Prepare your dog for doing longer sequences without rewards. The biggest difference between training and trialing is usually that we reward our dogs much more often during training. This is usually what makes dogs "ring wise", they will find that difference out and stop performing as well in trials. Make sure that you do longer sequences without rewarding (of course, there is always a reward at the end of the sequence) in training and not just rewarding every exercise. My goal is to have the dog do 50% more (than what is required in a competition) before getting rewarded in training before we go to a trial. Sequences as a concept can be trained as soon as the puppy knows a few behaviors. Instead of rewarding every cued behavior, you might ask the puppy to "down" after coming to heel position and then reward. As the puppy gets used to that, you will sometimes start asking for more. I would say that this is the most important thing to do before trialing. If you do this well, you probably don't have to worry about your dog getting ring wise.
- Do your training in a trial like setting. Arrange training that looks a lot like a real trial. Preferably, you'd set up a ring in an unknown location with new people and new dogs around. Let people act as judge and ring steward. This is the optimal set up, but I also find that just bringing in one or two of these elements into my training helps a lot. I might be at home, but have a ring set up and someone new telling me where to go in the ring. Or I might go to a new place and do trial like training with our usual training group. It all helps a lot!
- A common mistake is to make trial-like training boring for the dog. As soon as we do training in a trial-like setting, we want to try hard things to see what the dog can do. We reward more seldom than in our regular training and we add too many difficult tasks for the dog at once. Then all of this training is bad for our future career, just as if we'd already taken an unprepared dog and trialed. You risk making the dog ring wise before even entering a trial. So make sure that you give your dog pleasant memories from the "trial". Do easy stuff that you know that your dog will be good at. Make sure that your rewards are extra good. The most important thing is that the dog starts liking trials. The really hard challenges can be saved for training at home. You will of course at some point do hard things in a trial-like setting, but by then your dog should be at an even higher level while training at home.
- Do a lot of training on heeling the dog into the ring and heeling the dog between exercises. A lot of people tend to only train on exercises before trialing, but that would not make the dog fully prepared for the trial. In a trial, you also have to walk into the ring and heel the dog between exercises. Working on how to enter the ring is important for many reasons. I would get very nervous if my dog wasn't with me while walking into the ring and my dog would probably not do as well in the exercises if she had to start the trial with something we never trained for. This is also your chance to give the judge a good first impression of you as a team. So train your heeling into the ring and between exercises. Don't always reward when your dog finishes an exercise, do some heeling before rewarding from time to time.
- Proof for distractions. List all the distractions that could happen at a trial and train for them: A clumsy ring steward, dumbbells right by the jump, cones in your way while heeling, loud speakers, people commanding their dogs in a loud and aggressive way, food on the ground, bitches in heat, judges that follow you close by while heeling etc.
- Train for more than what is required by the rules. Few will perform as good in a trial as they do while training. Make sure that your dog can do a little bit more than what you will be doing in a trial. Longer distances, harder challenges and tough distractions. This will allow you to perform worse than in training but still be perfect in a trial. This will also make sure that your dog finds trialing easy and fun.

- The canine nose works one million times more efficiently than the human nose.
- Most domestic dogs are capable of reaching speeds of 32 km's per hour when running flat out but the members of the greyhound family may reach speeds up to 70 km's per hour.
- A dog's ear is very sensitive, full of sensory nerves that help to preserve hearing. Never, blow into a dog's ear, even gently can hurt a dog. It's not the actual act of wind, but the frequency at which you blow. It's like running your fingers on a blackboard, amplified hundreds of times.
